

ISS teardown completed

Slightly cooler today with temperatures in the mid-70s and a good southerly breeze, becoming gusty later in the afternoon.

We completed the ISS teardown, mostly just tidying up. Josh moved the ISS1 trailer closer to the main gate for easy pickup on Monday.

We spent most of the day helping the ISFS crew pack up the trailer tower, the base trailer, and their storage container. They are mostly done with just a bit of tidying up to do tomorrow.

The two storage containers, ISS1, the ISFS base trailer, and the tower trailer will all be picked up on Monday. The telehandler forklift was due to be picked up today, but apparently that has been delayed until Monday as well.

All of the ISS crew will be leaving tomorrow. Josh and Antonio will start driving MISS home, Sam will drive the GSA Pathfinder home, and Clayton, David, and I will be flying back. Ben, Dexter, and Halle left this morning, and Tony and Justin will leave on Monday after the trailers are picked up. Thanks to all for a great campaign.

David coiling cable at the ISFS trailer tower (left), and Antonio and Sam (wearing his new hat) getting a workout carrying batteries (right)

Josh moving the ISS1 trailer (left) and Bill moving the forklift (right).